The Rain and the Sidewalk is principally Trevor Thompson, a distant, irritating, tortured soul in Vancouver, B.C., who creates moody, semi-electronic, post-punk art-pop, with industrial smatterings.

Initially, TRATS began as solo project around 2001. Once the band began performing live, it expanded, with the addition of the vocals of Shannon Hallett (Betty Kracker) and Vancouver poet and occasional songwriting partner Wayde Compton on bass/guitar/vocals. The band's live shows feature unique song reinterpretations, some never to be recreated again.

The first CD, Inanimate was released in 2006. It's 16 songs convey brutal honesty, alienation, intelligence, loneliness, and dark, dry wit. The arrangements are complex and layered and as atmospheric as they are danceable. Inanimate inhabits the blurred regions between indietronica, goth, darkwave and ambient. A limited edition remix CD, Redundant, was released in 2008.

The newest double CD, Weakness, containing over 26 songs, was released on September 5, 2009. It is charting or playlisted on many college stations.

The band plans to tour in support of this CD (joined by Shannon), in eastern Canada and Europe in 2010.

"- hopelessly bleak lyrics from a sad, lonely, smart introvert"

- Terminal City
